Description

18th Century,
Italian Barocchetto Carved and Lacquered Wood BenchThis bench was crafted during the Barocchetto period (Rococo) in the mid-18th century in Piedmont, Italy. Made of carved and lacquered wood, it features a sinuous and undulating silhouette. The seat, upholstered in antique rose velvet, is in excellent condition. The wooden frame has a shaped profile, with a yellow-lacquered edging surrounding the apron beneath the seat, lacquered in sugar-paper blue, and six cabriole legs typical of the Barocchetto style.
Originally conceived as a wall bench, it stands out for its elegance and visual lightness.

Highly decorative thanks to its delicate color palette, it can also be placed at the center of a room--in entryways, hallways, living rooms, or at the foot of a bed--blending easily with both antique and modern furnishings.
