Description

Carved Walnut Helmeted Warrior in High Relief to scale One. A rather atypical sculpture representing the face of a helmeted man, a warrior in high relief. In fact, this face seems to want to emerge from its shield with a very particular expression, a little like a coat of arms, probably a Tyrolean work dating from the eighteenth century, therefore executed in walnut. The nose was restored in the nineteenth century. The nose was restored in the 19th century. It rests in an openwork frame with stylized and openwork floral motifs. This sculpture has enormous presence, the man seems to have a strong personality, a rather surprising warrior sculpture. Dimensions: 64 cm high by 35 cm wide and 20 cm deep.
