

Japanese Firefighter's Kimono "hikeshi-banten" - Meiji Period (1868-1912).

2 850 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Linen

Width : 118 cm.

Height : 113 cm.

Description

JAPAN - Meiji Period (1868-1912).HIKESHI BANTEN - Japanese firefighter's kimono jacket, made of thick, quilted cotton fabric with sashiko stitching, designed to be filled with water to protect the wearer from the heat of the flames. It is decorated using the "tsutsugaki" technique--a freehand resist dyeing process on an indigo background--featuring interlaced "tobiguchi" (a Japanese firefighter's tool resembling a pickaxe) and Chinese characters.Very good overall condition, with slight signs of wear at the nape of the neck. Dimensions: 113 x 118 cm. Notes: Firefighters played a vital role in Edo-period cities, which were regularly devastated by fires. The rudimentary equipment they used during their interventions meant they were viewed as true heroes, ready to sacrifice themselves for the

Dealer

ANTIQUES YF

Arts du samurai et Arts du Japon

Mobile : 0608649576

4 allée de pomone

Gressy 77410

community.