incised motifs (geometric signs, stylized figures and free lines) evoking a graphic repertoire close to art, where the engraved gesture takes precedence over the ornament. The original cylindrical shades, in woven fiber, complement the ensemble with light, emphasizing the relief of the decor. Trained before devoting himself to ceramics, Jacques BLIN develops a singular where structural rigor and graphic freedom coexist. His often likened to archaic forms of expression, are less about decorative than a veritable system of signs. This approach gives his creations an aesthetic and conceptual dimension. The present pair fully illustrates this approach, where light reveals the depth of the and animates the surface. The preservation of the original lampshades
