

---

Miniature Lantern Clock With Alarm, Early 18th Century, James Berrie, London.

1 060 EUR

Signature : James Berrie

Period : 18th century

Condition : Prévoir restauration

Material : Brass

Height : 23 cm

Description

Brass miniature lantern clock, early 18th century, 30 hours, with alarm. Signed "James Berrie, London" on the bow, it features a matte center with a single hand, a silvered alarm dial and hour ring, and spandrels decorated with foliage. Its verge escapement movement, with short pendulum and bell striking, is driven by a cord and a weight. Height: 23 cm. Condition: As we are not watchmakers, we can provide no condition report, instructions or guarantee as to the operation of the movement. Therefore, it should be considered that the clock does not work and requires an overhaul. It has probably undergone restoration and replacement of movement components. The weights are missing. Provenance: Estate of the late William John Thornton (1937-2025), of Groby,

Dealer

Lefays

Fine, affordable, art and antiques with excellent customer service

Mobile : +44 7772174440

Hare Lane,

Chard TA20

Leicestershire, an active member of the Antiquarian Horological Society, who gave several lectures to its members at Keble College, Oxford University. Delivery: Free to most destinations. Please note that import charges (customs duties or VAT, for example) are the responsibility of the buyer. We can advise you on the likely amount of these charges, but we cannot guarantee it, if you provide us with the delivery address.