Description

A beautiful Theodora by the artist Juana Romani (1867-1923), reproduced in enamel by the talented artist Pujol de Limoges in the "60s," this proud-looking woman in slight profile against a red background, with her fair skin and long black hair (treated in matte) in an enamel of remarkable glaze and transparency that only enchanting enamel can achieve. Dressed in a Renaissance-style gown with open collar, gold braid and translucent emerald-green bustier, she is a beautiful young woman in a proud, theatrical pose in the manner of the painter Henner, a precursor of Art Nouveau, and set in a precious dark frame with wide cornice and gilded bronze frame chased into the generous margin, highlighting this proud lady in the spirit of the Renaissance. The artist Pujol has translated all the
