Description

Oil on canvas - Germanic school, late 17th or early 18th centuryPosterior black and gold frame, 19th century work.This large canvas depicts the month of November according to the iconography of Joachim von Sandrart: a young hunter wearing a fur cap, carrying his game on his shoulder, accompanied by his dog. The low evening light, the deep green mantle and the hilly landscape bathed in ochre and grey convey the melancholy of late autumn. Emblematic work of Baroque taste.Emblematic work of German Baroque taste, where the hunt becomes an allegory of the passing of time and the cycle of the seasons.
