Description

Magnificent terracotta jug with geometric ladder motifs around the circumference, from the Luristan Empire, circa 800 B.C., in the Zagros Mountains region of western Iran. In a superb hue, this jug features painted decorations that extend around its entire circumference, and an elegant handle. Remarkably well preserved and ideally sized, it is a magnificent example of utilitarian ceramics from the Luristan Empire. Provenance: from a New York gallery, it previously belonged to a 1960s Floridian collection, acquired on the London art market.
