Prix Claverie, Torrents, Prix de la Ville, Prix Cantini and diplomas that led her to the professorship of plastic art After a period of material research, marked by expressionism, her imagination led her to interesting collages. Sculpting and assembling She remains an example of those curious Marseilles artists, always ready to question themselves, following the impulsive imperatives of their inner world and not the various fashions of the moment. She was a member of the Péano group, rubbing shoulders with Ambrogiani and Ferrari In the painting I'm proposing to you, you can even feel an influence from M^élik, in the colors and shapes. This modernist composition represents (in my opinion) Golgotha, with the Holy Sepulchre in the background. I see several crucifixions, including Jesus in the center and Mary Magdalene on her knees. However, I'd be curious to hear other opinions.
