Description

The scene depicts a group of figures in 18th-century aristocratic dress engaged in an outdoor conversation, a typical theme of French Rococo painting. It is signed "AVDL" at the bottom. The monogram or signature "AVDL" is often associated with Flemish painters who, between the late 18th and 19th centuries, specialized in recreating French Rococo atmospheres (the so-called fêtes galantes). The composition, with its sumptuous dresses, powdered wigs, and the theatrical interaction between the figures in a park, is typical of this repertoire. The frame is gilded wood from the same period.
