Description

An elegant, finely modeled sculpture in patinated bronze by Émile François Carlier, entitled Candeur, aptly illustrating the refined aesthetic of the late 19th century and the tradition of French academic sculpture. The standing female figure is depicted in an intimate, contemplative moment, leaning slightly forward, observing the water at her feet. This introspective attitude, combined with gentle expression and subtle gestures, lends the piece a poetic, almost dreamlike quality. The natural treatment of the drapery and the finesse of the modelling testify to Carlier's remarkable mastery. The warm, nuanced patina enhances the play of light and underlines the plastic quality of the work. The sculpture rests on a circular base, signed, and bears an applied label "Candeur / par E. Carlier (sculpteur)", confirming the title and
