Elegant late 18th-century oil on glass painting depicting a sacred scene with the Virgin Mary, Saint Joseph and the Christ Child. The work originally belonged to a larger series related to a Way of the Cross, as suggested by its format and composition typical of devotional cycles. The quality of execution, visible in the faces, drapery and overall composition, indicates a skilled hand and a work of good artistic level rather than purely popular production. The glass support enhances the luminosity of the pigments, typical of late 18th-century workmanship. Frame not original.
