Description

Stool - Songye - Congo RDC.seats and stools in african tribal artIt's particularly interesting to see how far a sculptor, working in accordance with the artistic canons of a society, can push his limits and still produce a work accepted by his community. The architectural qualities of Songye (Basongye) sculpture are evident in the magnificent prestige stool shown here. It was designed by a master sculptor who worked between 1920 and 1970.African Songye prestige stools resemble those used by their neighbors, the Luba.J. D. Flam considers caryatids to be symbolic ancestors, a link between the living and the dead, an affirmation of the chief's power and ancestral continuity.
