not re-gilded.In keeping with the work of the great Parisian master cabinetmakers of the early 18th century, the frame and back are in oak, the side panels, intermediate bottoms and drawer fronts are in fir, and finally the drawer sides and bottoms are in walnut, the latter fitted into the sides and back rail to slide flat onto the intermediate bottoms. Sarcophagus commodes are rare, produced over a fairly short period covering the late reign of Louis XIV and the Regency, and most without stamps.
