Description

Oil on canvas depicting a flowering rose branch blooming above a peaceful pond covered with water lilies. The composition seduces with its soft, poetic atmosphere, where roses in delicate shades of pink and white stand out against a deep plant background. Touches of yellow from the water lily blossoms enliven the water's surface, while subtle reflections and pictorial matter lend the whole a beautiful vibrancy. The treatment of the brushstrokes in this composition is a masterful blend of light and shade. The treatment of the brushstroke, supple and slightly impastoed, testifies to a sensitive work, in the naturalist tradition of the late 19th century, close to the spirit of garden and pond scenes then in vogue. The work is signed lower right F. Lindley. It is presented in an frame with molded
