Description

This poetic oil on canvas portrait represents a classic example of sentimental romanticism and dates back to the first half of the 19th century. The scene captures a quiet garden corner where a young woman finds a moment of solitude after gathering flowers. Her modest beauty exudes the idyllic charm that defined the aesthetics of the time. The heroine's posture is full of peace; her hands are folded on her knee, and her thoughtful gaze is directed into the distance, as if she is immersed in a world of her own dreams. Acting as a compositional counterbalance is a woven basket standing on the right, filled to the brim with garden flowers and executed with special "still life" detailing. Rendered with high professional skill and careful attention to texture, this painting will make a stunning addition to any
