Description

Superb oil on canvas depicting a scene of fishermen landing on a rough coast, work signed lower right by Jean Mazzella, a painter active in the 19th century, specializing in seascapes and scenes of coastal life. The composition is particularly dynamic. The composition is particularly dynamic: in the foreground, sailors struggle against the waves to pull their boat onto the shore, accompanied by their equipment and barrels. The background opens onto a choppy sea where other boats move under a heavy sky, treated with a fine mastery of light and contrasts. The overall effect is one of awe. The whole gives off a lively, realistic atmosphere, characteristic of 19th-century maritime genre scenes, with remarkable work on water movement and lighting effects.
