Description

Domenico Parodi (Genoa, 1672 - 1742) Portrait of Anne Marie d'Orléans (Château de Saint-Cloud, 27 August 1669 - Turin, 26 August 1728), first queen consort of Sardinia and maternal grandmother of Louis XV of France Oil on oval canvas 75 x 58 cm Framed 88 x 72 cm. The painting depicts a young noblewoman, identifiable as Anne Marie d'Orléans (St. Cloud 27 August 1669 - Turin 26 August 1728), daughter of Philip of Orléans (brother of Louis XIV), who later became the wife of Victor Amadeus II of Savoy in 1684. The noblewoman, immortalised in a half-length pose with an expression winking with a smile, is richly dressed in a blue dress decorated along the wide neckline with white lace, embellished with numerous jewelled details, and is wrapped in an iridescent red cloak. iconographic comparisons see a painting in the Royal Palace, published in the exhibition catalogue 'Royales effigies' in Chambéry (cf. exhibition catalogue, Chambéry 1985-1986, p. 25), a full-length portrait in Racconigi (cf. Noemi Gabrielli, 'Racconigi', Turin 1972, p. 202;) and an oval in the Galleria Sabauda (in M. L. Moncassoli Tibone, 'Portraits for a King. Vittorio Amedeo II dalla storia all'immagine", Turin 1991, p. 17). The absence of royal attributes makes it impossible to circumscribe the date, although we can assume that the work was painted in the first decades of the 18th century. The painting, given its stylistic features, is in our opinion a work attributable to Domenico Parodi, one of the best Italian portrait painters between the end of the 17th century and the first half of the 18th century, who, just as our effigy shows, set his art according to the most usual French models, fully belonging to the genre of the "French-style" portrait, inaugurated by Hyacinthe Rigaud at the beginning of the 18th century, known thanks to the numerous copies and engravings. Indeed, it must be remembered that the intense cultural interchange between France and Italy led the Italian nobility to nurture a profound admiration for the pictorial taste imported from France, especially between the first and second decade of the 18th century, becoming an indispensable model for authors such as Parodi.
