Description

Elegant coral specimen mounted as a curiosity object, presented on a blackened turned wood stand, in the spirit of late 19th century, Napoleon III era productions. The coral, belonging to the genus Fungia (mushroom coral), seduces with its radiating structure and finely ribbed texture, offering a natural decoration of great delicacy. The set rests on a turned black wood base with a slender, balanced silhouette, enhanced by brass mounting. This presentation is directly reminiscent of cabinets of curiosities, where natural wonders were carefully staged. A decorative object that's both scientific and aesthetically pleasing, ideal for a bookcase, desk or display case.
