Portrait of a Piedmontese Noblewoman, oil on canvas, 18th century
Portrait of a Piedmontese Noblewoman
Piedmontese School, 18th century
Oil on canvas 102 × 78 cm
Description
An elegant half-length portrait of a woman, set against a dark, neutral background, in keeping with the conventions of 18th-century aristocratic portraiture. The young noblewoman is depicted in a composed, slightly turned pose, her gaze directed toward the viewer, conveying an air of understated confidence and grace. Her face, luminous and finely sculpted, emerges delicately from the shadows, highlighted by a soft light that enhances her regular features and diaphanous complexion. Her hair, styled according to the fashion of the time, is gathered and powdered, helping to define the figure's social rank. Her attire is particularly refined: the noblewoman wears a light silk gown, likely ivory or pearl gray, with a neckline adorned with lace and a central bow. A large blue-green drape, rendered with soft folds and vibrant tonal transitions, wraps around her shoulders and arm, introducing a refined chromatic contrast.
