Description

Interesting oil on canvas signed Gilbert Thévenot, part of a plastic research influenced by constructivist currents and late post-war cubism. The composition is organized around an interplay of interlocking geometric shapes - circles, semicircles and architectural planes - structured by a contrasting palette of mineral grays, deep blacks, off-whites and vibrant oranges. The whole evokes a balance between mathematical rigor and painterly energy. The material is particularly present: a dense, slightly grainy texture enlivens the surface, catching the light and giving relief to the whole. The contours, subtly emphasized, reinforce the graphic construction, while retaining a certain freedom of execution. The work exudes a sense of freedom, a sense of space and a sense of place.
