Description

White marble sculpture depicting a child's face emerging from a rough block, created in the mid-20th century. The piece stands out for the harmonious contrast between the finely polished face, carved with a joyful expression and delicate features, and the intentionally rough surrounding surface, reflecting the aesthetic of the "unfinished" form. The marble shows a compact grain and a slightly ivory tone, with a pleasing material quality and substantial weight, indicating solid natural stone. A decorative sculpture of good quality, suitable for both classical and contemporary interiors, ideal as a display or collector's piece. Period: mid-20th century Material: natural white marble Dimensions: Height 33 cm Width 31 cm Depth 16 cm Good overall condition, with
