Description

The allure of scholarly travel and discovery is brought back to life in this great opportunity: a splendid and important pair of "Grand Tour" vases, a refined testament to an era when Italy was the ultimate destination for aristocrats and intellectuals from across Europe. Crafted in earthenware (terraglia) at the beginning of the 19th century, these vases are exquisite reproductions that faithfully draw inspiration from the forms and decorations of ancient excavated finds. Produced between the late 18th and early 19th centuries, these objects were more than mere souvenirs; they were true symbols of status and culture, created to allow travelers to bring home a fragment of the classical beauty admired during their stay in Italy. Their timeless silhouette and Italian craftsmanship make this
