Description

Explore the thousand-year-old charm of the Orient with this great opportunity among my proposals: a splendid and important triptych of expression masks, an authentic witness to traditional Chinese theater from the early 20th century. Masterfully crafted in "papier mache", these three masks represent distinct characters, each characterized by unique and vibrant facial expressions designed to convey deep emotions during ancient Chinese theater performances. A fascinating technical detail is the presence of a fine transparent mesh at eye level, which allowed actors to move safely across the stage while wearing them, maintaining the theatrical illusion for the audience. Originating from mainland China and dating back to the early 20th century, these masks boast significant dimensions (h. 34
