Description

Pink stoneware sculpture by Robert Neuhauser, Switzerland, circa mid-1980s. The piece develops a compact volume structured by hollows and an incised central line, introducing tension into an otherwise soft, continuous form. The surface, with its nuanced pink tones, catches the light and emphasizes the carving. It is part of the artist's research into form and material, notably presented at the Arbeiten in Stein exhibition at Galerie Sigristenkeller in Bülach in 1989. Switzerland, circa 1985.
