Description

Porcelain subject - Marshal Ney - Kaiser, late 19th century
Fine hand-painted porcelain subject depicting Marshal Ney, one of Napoleon's most famous officers and an emblematic figure of the Empire. The base bears a blue underglaze mark "AK" surmounted by a crown, the signature of the Kaiser factory, active in Bavaria at the end of the 19th century. Founded by August Alboth, this manufactory distinguished itself by producing high-quality porcelain, renowned for its fine workmanship and durability. The term "Kaiser" refers to the German Empire founded in 1871, setting these creations in a historical context imbued with imperial prestige. Marshal Ney, marshal of the Empire, was nicknamed "the bravest of the brave". One of Napoleon's most popular officers, he epitomized the heroic,
