Description

Important 18th-century painted canvas of Provençal origin, depicting a lively wooded landscape beside a river, punctuated by architecture evoking a church or rural building. The scene, treated with beautiful decorative sensitivity, is set in a painted frame with rich floral decoration, typical of southern productions intended for the ornamentation of bastides and residences of character. Because of its remarkable dimensions (2.91 m high by 1.71 m wide), this canvas is a genuine element of wall decoration, offering a strong presence and a great evocative quality. It comes from a bastide in Aix, where it probably adorned an interior, testifying to the art of living and taste for painted decor in 18th-century Provence. Used condition with traces of age, creases and old restorations visible
