Description

Ostensor sun in gilded bronze resting on three feet adorned with foliate motifs. The terrace, composed of several doucines and shaped with six lobes, is enriched with round medallions decorated with quatrefoils, instruments of Christ's Passion, a crown of thorns with Passion nails, as well as a stylized cross. The shaft, of tubular section, is chased with lozenges and foliate motifs. It features a large toric knot sculpted with square buttons decorated with quatrefoils and medallions with palmettes on a guilloché background. Above, a pinnacled crown adorned with fleur-de-lys marks the transition to glory. At the base of the knot, a ring holds an ornamentation of large water leaves falling onto the foot's terrace. The large central bezel is surrounded by a sprig of leaves and encircled by
