who wish to own a precious and unique object. The density of the decoration is a characteristic element of the evolution of the Baroque style, as an emblem of splendour and power. From a structural point of view, the carving consists of spiral volutes and carved acanthus leaves, emphasised by the exceptional thickness of the frame and the concentration of the carving. Frames of similar workmanship, richly carved with leafy scroll motifs, were widespread in the 17th century: for comparison, see those in the Palatine Gallery in Florence, the links to which are given below:-
