Description

.This work belongs to an early phase of Simon Pasieka's figurative practice, developed in the early 2010s, where the artist began establishing the visual language that would define his later work: ambiguous bodies, psychological presence, and poetic spatial construction.It depicts an androgynous, introspective figure standing in a field, with one arm raised toward the sky. The figure wears a rainbow-coloured bodysuit, while a rainbow appears above, framing the scene. The work originates from Galerie Mircher, Paris (Le Marais). , As an early dated work (2012), it reflects a more direct and less mediated phase of the artist's practice, often sought after by collectors interested in the development of his pictorial language. Presented in its original frame with a rainbow coloured liner.
