Description

A delicate and evocative portrait of a young lady, a "Noblewoman," executed in oil on canvas and attributed to the French school of the Louis XV era. The work depicts an aristocratic figure with typically Rococo elegance, characterized by a luminous complexion, rosy cheeks, and a soft, direct gaze. The young woman wears a sumptuous silk dress in shades of ruby red, embellished with refined gold details and an elegant embroidered corsage. Her elaborate hairstyle, adorned with ribbons, is perfectly in keeping with the fashion of the period. The dark, warm background enhances the figure, lending depth and highlighting the diaphanous complexion and the preciousness of the clothing. The work is presented in a magnificent gilded wooden frame, finely carved with floral motifs. 54x47 cm with
