Description

This mid-century oil on canvas by the renowned Swedish modernist Henry Eldin (b. 1921) reveals an expressive harbour scene, where a young woman purchases fish against a backdrop of piers and narrow market stalls. Her thoughtful, slightly detached gaze brings an unexpected psychological depth to the composition. Whether she is carefully assessing the freshness of the morning catch or simply mesmerised by the scales shimmering in the bright sunlight - one can only guess. The painting is executed in a bold impasto technique with a high degree of expression. The artist's primary intention was to convey emotion, light and volume purely through colour. Such confident brushwork is characteristic of established Swedish masters who drew inspiration from French Fauvism. This
