Description

Pair of Louis XVI Style Gilt Bronze Flambeaux,
Converted into Lamps, c. 1820-1850

This elegant pair of finely chiseled gilt bronze flambeaux stands out for its original gilding and refined décor of fluting and acanthus leaves, hallmarks of the Louis XVI style. Their harmonious silhouette and meticulous finish reflect exceptional craftsmanship.

Manufactured in France during the first half of the 19th century (circa 1820-1850), these flambeaux embody the neoclassical taste and return to antiquity that define this period. They are in excellent condition, with a gilding that shows slight wear, enhancing their authenticity and charm.
