Condition : Très bon état

Material : Wood marquetry

Description

This elegant Louis XVI desk, crafted in fine Neapolitan craftsmanship, embodies the neoclassical taste of the late 18th century. The piece stands out for its sober and harmonious lines, typical of the style, embellished with rich rosewood trim arranged with great geometric mastery. The finely inlaid rectangular top features a delicate central motif that highlights the natural grain of the woods. The front panel is punctuated by a main drawer and two side drawers, all decorated with elegant filleting and inlays in precious woods, creating a refined play of colors. The sides are adorned with panels inlaid with floral and geometric motifs, while the slender, fluted, truncated pyramid legs end with small bronze tips, lending a sense of lightness and elegance to the overall design.
