Bottle, "Miniature Sailing Ship" - 1950s
Evocative blown glass bottle containing a detailed, handcrafted model of a four-masted sailing ship. The vessel, complete with masts, shrouds, and small flags, is inserted inside the bottle using the traditional "ship-in-a-bottle" artisanal technique. These models are crafted with great precision, inserting the ship with the masts down and raising them once inside via a system of wires. It is considered a symbol of craftsmanship and patience, often referred to as a "patience bottle." The glass has a light patina and signs of aging, attesting to its authenticity and vintage charm. The internal model displays fine workmanship. Features: * Material: glass and wood/wire for the model* Technique: artisanal * Period: presumably mid-20th century *
