Description

A rare pair of Art Deco countertops from the 1920s and a tall display case by De Coene, the famous Belgian house. These pieces perfectly illustrate the workshop's mastery of modernist elegance, refined craftsmanship and architectural design. Their elongated silhouettes, rounded corners and interplay of oak veneer and glass panels convey the clean, assertive aesthetic that characterized De Coene's early creations. The counters and tall display case have been carefully restored, revealing all the depth and warmth of the oak veneer while preserving the integrity of the original design. The fronts feature a rhythmic arrangement of horizontal and vertical elements, giving each piece a sculptural presence. The glazed sections bring transparency and lightness, balancing the robustness of the wood and sublimating their display potential. The interiors offer generous storage and organization spaces, testifying to De Coene's commitment to functional sophistication. Every curve, every joint, every surface reflects the workshop's attention to detail and its reputation as one of Belgium's most influential furniture makers at the turn of the 20th century. Originally designed for refined commercial or residential spaces - boutiques, lobbies or private offices - these counters are now transformed into bars, TV stands, display cases or decorative highlights in contemporary interiors. Their dimensions, symmetry and rich materials make them particularly attractive when combined. An exceptional and rare set of two Art Deco De Coene counters, combining historic craftsmanship and renewed elegance. Furniture dimensions: Height: 275 cm, Width: 220 cm, Depth: 43 cm.
