"The Echo of Dionysus"
Bas-relief in Pietra di Signa, 20th century
Dimensions: 48 x 68 cm (slab) - 66 x 85 cm (with frame)
A striking bas-relief in the neoclassical style, The Echo of Dionysus translates the timeless charm of ancient myth into sculptural form, evoking a Dionysian ritual suspended between harmony and sensory ecstasy. Crafted in Pietra di Signa, the composition stands out for the finesse of its carving and its ability to convey movement and rhythm through the three-dimensionality of the sculpted surface. At the center of the scene, a satyr, captured in the act of playing the aulos, becomes the dynamic focal point of the entire narrative: the invisible music seems to radiate through the space, animating the two maenads flanking him. The female figures, draped in flowing, light drapery, are rendered with a fluid grace that evokes classical models, while their poses suggest an ecstatic dance, lost in the intoxication of the ritual. The surface of the stone, soft and luminous, enhances the volumes and chiaroscuro, lending depth and vibrancy to the whole. The carved, richly decorated wooden frame elegantly frames the work, emphasizing its decorative and collectible character.
