Description

An extraordinary and extremely rare devotional glass painting, depicting the Virgin Mary in a meditative pose, characterized by a delicate spiritual expression and refined color rendering. The work is attributed to the Neapolitan school of the mid-18th century, a period of great artistic and devotional fervor in the Kingdom of Naples. The figure of the Virgin, surrounded by a crown of stars symbolizing purity and celestial grace, is executed with remarkable pictorial sensitivity, typical of the Southern Italian tradition, where glass painting was intended for cultured patrons and private religious settings. The extremely challenging technique lends the image an intense luminosity and a unique visual depth. The painting is embellished with a finely crafted silver frame, enriched with a complex
