Born in Paris in 1921, Pierre Piot died in 1998 in the Gers region, where he had retired. After studying at the Beaux-Arts, he spent a number of years in Venice and Florence. A very independent figurative painter, he remained faithful to a painting style that was out of fashion. Despite a weakness for oil, the artist experimented with all styles: pastel, Indian ink, gouache and red chalk. His love of beauty led him to paint silk
