Description

A highly characteristic hunting scene by the French sculptor, one of the leading exponents of the 19th-century animal movement in France. It depicts a stag in full assault, head raised and mouth open, no doubt in pain, as dogs attack. The entire piece rests on vegetation evoking the natural terrain.The anatomical quality of the animals is emphasized, as is the movement captured at the precise moment. The work tells the story of a real hunting scene, set against a vegetal backdrop.
