High-quality work, probably late 19th century. In the center, under curved glass, is presented an important bone relic (ex ossibus), held in place by silk threads. The relic is set against a light textile background, according to a traditional mounting. The reverse is carefully closed with a pleated textile mount, crossed with silk threads and sealed with an antique wax seal, guaranteeing the integrity of the reliquary. The set is accompanied by its authentic Latin manuscript
