Description

An elegant French writing desk from the late 19th century, crafted from fine solid oak. The piece features two front drawers with original knobs and a leather-covered top, framed by refined wooden molding. The turned legs end in original casters, a functional and decorative detail typical of French furniture of the period. Its balanced proportions and understated elegance make it a versatile piece of furniture, ideal both as a writing desk and as a center table for a study or a classic living room. A highly charming piece, perfectly suited to traditional or eclectic interiors, a testament to late 19th-century French craftsmanship.
