period in Venice. The decisive turning point in his career came in the mid-1850s when, together with his brother Puccio, he received the important commission from patron Francis Joseph Sloane to decorate the Medici Villa in Careggi with historical subjects linked to the Medici family. The great success of this work opened the doors to high society for him and secured him a solid critical reputation, leading him to obtain prestigious professorships in painting, first in Florence and then at the Academy of Bologna.
