Landscape depicting cows drinking from a water source in a valley bathed in sunset light. An inscription on the back tells us that the scene takes place near Thury-Harcourt, Normandy. Signed "Félix Planquette" in the lower right corner. Félix Planquette (1873-1964) was an animal and landscape painter trained at the Beaux-Arts in Arras and Lille. He was a member of the École de Wissant, a group of artists who settled in the small town of the same name on the Opal Coast, meeting on the beach and in the surrounding countryside to paint. In addition to his native region, he also painted Normandy, the Côte d'Azur and La Creuse, and traveled to Spain and Scotland. Exhibiting at the Salon from 1894, he won several medals, was awarded a travel grant in 1905 and was awarded the Prix Rosa
