Description

Forged brass serving tray, painted and patinated, adorned with a naturalistic decoration of plane tree leaves and fruit of great finesse. The composition, elegant and balanced, highlights subtle material work, typical of the transition period between Art Nouveau and Art Deco. The plant elements, treated in relief at the ends, give the whole a presence that is both decorative and sculptural. Signed T. Demarcq, this platter could be part of a production from northern France or Belgium, where this surname is more frequently encountered - an interesting lead, without formal certainty at this stage. The choice of T. Demarcq for this platter is based on a choice made by T. Demarcq. The choice of the platen as a motif is particularly remarkable: it is a decoration very rarely used in the decorative arts, which gives this
