1910-1930. Whether he owned or rented the property is difficult to determine today.

Nevertheless, several views of his garden exist, and numerous landscapes of the banks of the Garonne are known. Our work, a composition of which, painted from the opposite direction, exists from the same year, is open in its center to a path, painted with broad strokes. On the left, the Garonne River is revealed, discreet in its shades of yellow and green, in a composition typical of the painter's style, where foliage dominates. This panel, from 1929, belongs to the artist's final period. We are seeking any works or information relating to the artist in order to complete his biography and a catalogue raisonné currently being compiled.
