Description

An antique notary's desk is a specialized piece of furniture designed for official notarial functions, generally dating from the 19th century, between around 1830 and 1850. These desks often feature several compartments for storing documents and a lockable compartment for securing important papers. Some antique notary's offices (like this one) feature a built-in, lockable safe, designed to store valuables securely. These safes were often equipped with a small bell that rang when opened, providing additional security to alert the notary or office owner. It shows signs of wear and patina in keeping with its age and use. One of the rear legs has been professionally restored.Dimensions:Height: 170 cmWidth: 120 cmDepth: 83 cm
