Description

This porcelain vase is painted with a bouquet and polychromed with a bouquet, the artist has represented flowers, harmonizing their colors and treating them with such realism with realism and delicacy, to the point where you might think natural. Roses rub shoulders with deep-red peonies, brightened by the white of lilies and enhanced by yellow and violet flowers. On the back, a few throws complete this multicolored composition, including charming pansies, delicate clematis, vigorous volubilis and two fleshy roses. In very good condition, only some wear of the gilding on the rim of the collar. Mid 19th century, height 29.5cm.
