Description

Unusual clock, very architectural in the spirit of Neo-classicism, from the Napoleon III period signed on the mechanism

"G. PHILIPPE 66 PALAIS ROYAL 67", clockmaker referenced in the Tardy, dictionary of French clockmakers. In finely chiseled gilded bronze, made up of two solid parts, the upper part decorated with lion's paw feet rests on a richly worked base in a concave shape decorated with Greek friezes.

The lighter upper part, openworked by its many geometric patterned surfaces, accommodates on its sides lion's muzzles which are connected
