Description

Large oil on canvas (old re-coating) from the Ecole de Fontainebleau, entourage of Ambroise Dubois , depicting the Judgment of Midas , or the musical contest between Apollo and Marsyas. The bravado and ill-considered judgment of Midas earns him the condemnation of wearing donkey ears ; this story is taken from Ovid's Metamorphosis, an inexhaustible source of inspiration for artists of the 16th and 17th centuries. The composition shown here is a "good" example. Numerous high-quality details, harmonious composition and colors, great decorative quality for this "beautiful" painting presented in "good" condition, unframed.
